

TREANA

2022 CABERNET SAUVIGNON

Treana is rooted in the Hope family's Paso Robles heritage, dating back to the inaugural vintage of 1996. Treana's trio of natural elements—the soil of the vineyards, the warm sun that nurtures, and the cooling Pacific breeze—creates the perfect balance for our flagship wine. Our dedication to excellence continues today as we introduce the Treana 2022 Cabernet Sauvignon, blended and crafted from select districts across Paso Robles.

HARVEST NOTES

We source Treana Cabernet Sauvignon predominantly from three diverse districts in the Paso Robles AVA: the Estrella District with its loamy, gravelly river plain slopes and canyons; the San Juan District, featuring warmer temperatures than most of Paso Robles with deep sandy loam riverbed soils formed by ancient water flow; and the Geneseo District located in the heart of the AVA, where gentle rolling river plains are diverse in soil types but always contain ancient seabed deposits.

The 2022 growing season was slightly warmer than average. Mild conditions prevailed through spring and early summer, followed by a heat wave and extended warm temperatures in September that accelerated fruit ripening. On average, the grapes were picked a week a week earlier than typical.

WINEMAKING NOTES

After harvest, the different vineyard lots were fermented individually in stainless-steel tanks for 10 to 14 days. Extended macerations and carefully managed pumpovers enhanced the extraction of color and tannin. The lots were aged separately for 16 months in a combination of 25 percent once and twice used French oak and 75 percent neutral French and American oak. The initial blend was assembled in early February of 2024 and aged for an additional four months in 10 percent new and 36 percent once-used French oak. The wine was racked only twice during its cellar life, with the final racking occurring just prior to bottling.

TASTING NOTES

The 2022 Treana Cabernet Sauvignon opens with enveloping aromas of blue fruits, toasted oak, leather and tobacco leaf. A lusciously textured palate unfolds with flavors of black cherry, blackberry, blueberry and cinnamon graham. Notes of mocha join polished tannins on a juicy, sumptuous finish.
